

UNIVERSITATEA BABEȘ-BOLYAI
BABEȘ-BOLYAI TUDOMÁNYEGYETEM
BABEȘ-BOLYAI UNIVERSITÄT
BABEȘ-BOLYAI UNIVERSITY
TRADITIO ET EXCELLENTIA

STUDIA UNIVERSITATIS BABEȘ-BOLYAI PHILOLOGIA
Horea str. no. 31, 400202 Cluj-Napoca, ROMANIA
Contact: philologia.studia@ubbcluj.ro

Post-novel/Post-semiotic/Post-dispositif in Contemporary Literature. A World-Systems Perspective

Call for Papers

Special Issue 3/2025

Studia Universitatis Babeș-Bolyai Philologia

philologia.studia@ubbcluj.ro

Guest editors

Professor Stephen Shapiro, University of Warwick, UK

s.shapiro@warwick.ac.uk

Dr. Alex Ciorogar, Babeș-Bolyai University

alexandru.ciorogar@ubbcluj.ro

Many of the theoretical fundamentals developed for literary and cultural studies throughout the twentieth century have become less efficacious. In recent decades, scholars have, indeed, investigated the transformations of storytelling and cultural consumption in the digital age. However, this issue looks to further explore the future of literary and cultural studies from a world-systems perspective with a focus on the alterations of novelistic narratives in the larger context of the supplanting of liberal, humanistic, sense-making mechanisms by computational regimes of meaning. In this context, we would like to investigate 1) the decline of the category of the “novel” for long-form fiction, 2) interpretive methods grounded on semiotics, and 3) the claims for truth-formations through Michel Foucault’s notion of the apparatus/dispositif.

Today we assume all long fictions are novels because of the way this form so adeptly housed and reconfigured liberalism’s divisions. The novel could promote public-oriented national imaginaries and fictions of manifest destinies while plumbing the depths of privatizing desire by listening for interior signals. As liberalism promoted the self-enacting individual as the bulwark against the tyranny of the majority, the novel promoted the corresponding ideals of autonomous authors’ unique genius and stylistic signatures. Such was the novel’s success and dominance of liberal print culture that it managed to marginalize other forms of narrative, making them residual (the epic), or pushing them into the social subordination of “genre,” understood as the realm of para-literature and pulp or lowbrow production.

Yet, all the cultural languages that were once dominant lose their magnetic authority. The novel today, for instance, is now shaped by its nemesis through what is called the genre turn, wherein prestige writers adapt the para-literature of supernatural, fantasy, and science-fiction as a form better equipped to register and respond to the current moment.

Similarly, those credentialized by the university to study liberal literature similarly begin to devote their intelligence to serious discussion of generic writing or new media forms, like television, comic books, and video games. The liberal apparatus buttressed its civilizational claims for gradual development by deploying mechanistic and deterministic science and frequentist statistics to argue that social complexity could be expressed in predictable laws that were easily visualizable. However, the new computational platforms, from Google's search query to new forms of artificial intelligence now depend on a different kind of mathematics, one called Bayesian probability, wherein the known input of frequentist statistics is not required, since these are replaced with an inferential probability of future occurrences based on past examples. Unlike frequentist statistics, Bayesian probability does not seek to create regularities, but looks to dynamic optimalization that aims at developing better, but not necessarily always correct results.

The linguistic turn that motivated so much of the Humanities in the last 50 years, in its structuralist or poststructuralist guises, was based on the Saussurean binary claim that meaning is differential. Yet meaning today is not differential, but correlative, and the semiotic models have decreasing efficacy. Nowadays, we experience life in a "post-truth" society, not because of the appeal of relativizing claims about history and documentation, but because the academic institutions that authorized these statements have themselves become prey to the declining authority of liberalism's binary theoretical machinery. This issue aims to track the changes and substitutions in the semiotic regimes of the liberal apparatus, especially through the attempt to define a concept of the 'irrealist' or 'post' novel from a world-systems perspective, including the Romanian contemporary literary system and beyond.

Possible topics for the essays include but are not limited to:

- Fan-Fiction
- Collaborative Fiction
- Life Writing
- The post-Cold War novel
- Contemporary and post-communist narratives
- The transnational, international, global, cosmopolitan, or world novel
- The Digital Novel
- The Post-Novel

Indicative Bibliography:

Arboleda, Martín. 2020. Planetary Mine: Territories of Extraction under Late Capitalism. London: Verso.

Arrighi, Giovanni and David Harvey. 2009. "The Winding Paths of Capital." New Left Review, no. 56:61–94.

Brouillette, Sarah. 2007. Postcolonial Writers and the Global Literary Marketplace. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

Brown, Nicholas. 2005. Utopian Generations: The Political Horizon of Twentieth-Century Literature. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2005.

Brouillette, Sarah, Mathias Nilges, and Emilio Sauri (eds.). 2017. Literature and the Global Contemporary, London: Palgrave.

Deckard, Sharae and Stephen Shapiro, eds. 2019a. World-Literature, Neoliberalism, and the Culture of Discontent. London: Palgrave.

- De Loughry, Treasa. 2020. The Global Novel and Capitalism in Crisis. London: Palgrave.
- Fisher, Mark. 2009. Capitalist Realism: Is There No Alternative? Winchester, UK: Zero Books.
- Goldiș, Alex, Cosmin Borza, 'Introduction' in Alex Goldiș, Cosmin Borza (eds.), The subgenres of the Romanian novel: imports, backdrop, hybridizations, Dacoromania Litteraria, vol. VII, 2020.
- Moore, Jason W. 2016. Anthropocene or Capitalocene? Nature, History, and the Crisis of Capitalism. Oakland, CA: PM Press.
- Niblett, Michael. 2020. World Literature and Ecology: The Aesthetics of Commodity Frontiers. Palgrave.
- Nickels, Joel. 2018. World Literature and the Geographies of Resistance. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- Shapiro, Stephen. 2019a. "Foucault, Neoliberalism, Algorithmic Governmentality, and the Loss of Liberal Culture." In Neoliberalism and Contemporary American Literature, edited by Liam Kennedy and Stephen Shapiro, 43–72. Hanover, NH: Dartmouth College Press.
- . 2019b. "The World-Literary System and the Atlantic: Combined and Uneven Development—An Interview with Stephen Shapiro." Atlantic Studies 16(1):7–20.
- . 2022. "World-Systems and Literary Studies." In The Cambridge Companion to Literature and Economics, edited by Paul Crossthwaite, Peter Knight, and Nicky Marsh, 196–211. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- . 2023. "Zemiperiphery Matters: Immigration, Culture, and the Capitalist World System" in Wallerstein 2.0: Thinking and Applying World-Systems Theory in the 21st Century, Frank Jacob, ed., Transcript Press.
- . 2023. "Literary Value, Cultural Fixes, and Commodity Chains" in Der Wert der literarischen Zirkulation/The Value of Literary Circulation, Michael Gamper, Jutta Müller Tamm, David Wachter, and Jasmin Wrobel, eds., J. B. Metzler, 187–202.
- Wallerstein, Immanuel. 1979a. The Capitalist World-Economy. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- . 1979b. "The Rise and Future Demise of the World Capitalist System: Concepts for Comparative Analysis." In The Capitalist World-Economy, edited by Immanuel Wallerstein, 1–36. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- . 1990. "World-Systems Analysis: The Second Phase." Review 13(2):287–93.
- . 1991a. Geopolitics and Geoculture: Essays on the Changing World-System. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- . 1995a. "The Modern World-System and Evolution." Journal of World-Systems Research 1(19):1–15.
- . 1995b. After Liberalism. New York: The New Press.
- . 1997. "The National and the Universal: Can There Be Such a Thing as World Culture?" In Culture, Globalization, and the World-System, edited by Anthony D. King, 91–105. Minneapolis: University of Minneapolis Press.
- . 2004. World-Systems Analysis: An Introduction. Durham, NC: Duke University Press.
- . 2011a. "Thinking about the Humanities." In Immanuel Wallerstein and the Problem of the World: System, Scale, Culture, edited by David Palumbo-Liu, Nirvana Tanoukhi, and Bruce Robbins, 223–26. Durham, NC: Duke University Press.

———. 2011b. The Modern World-System IV: Centrist Liberalism Triumphant, 1789–1914. Berkeley: University of California Press.

———. 2012. "World-System Analysis as a Knowledge Movement." In Routledge Handbook of World-Systems Analysis, edited by Christopher Chase-Dunn and Salvatore Babones, 515–21. London: Routledge.

Warwick Research Collective (WReC). 2015. Combined and Uneven Development: Towards a New Theory of World-Literature. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press.

———. 2016. "Forum: Combined and Uneven Development." Comparative Literature Studies 53(3): 535–50.

Submission calendar:

- 31 December 2024 – proposal submission deadline (200-word abstract, 7 keywords, 5 theoretical references, 150-word author's bio-note);
- 1 October 2024 – notification about acceptance;
- 1 February 2025 – submission of full papers (Instructions for authors regarding formatting rules and style sheets can be found on the journal's webpage: http://studia.ubbcluj.ro/serii/philologia/pdf/Instructions_En.pdf);
- 30 September 2025 – publication of the special-themed issue.

Please send your abstracts and papers to the following email addresses:
philologia.studia@ubbcluj.ro, s.shapiro@warwick.ac.uk, alexandru.ciorogar@ubbcluj.ro